Cleveland was first inaugurated Mr. Cleveland was first inaugurated President March 4, 1855. Neither in his inaugural address nor in any message does he mention the subject of trusts until immediately preceding the election of 1888. In his last message preceding that campaign he refers to the existence of "combinations frequently called trusts," and closes with this sage conclusion:

"The people can hardly hope for any consideration in the operation of these selfish schemes."

NO REMEDY, HE SAYS.

He recommends no relief and suggests o remedy Nevertheless the Congress to no remedy Nevertheless the Congress to which this comprehensive statement of fact was submitted, a majority of the members of which belonged to his school of political thought, appointed a commission to investigate the subject. The purpose of the commission was to convince the people that their interests were not being neglected at least during the cambeing neglected, at least during the campaign, and that if Mr. Cleveland was re-elected some remedial legislation would follow. To that end this commission held meetings from time to time throughout the campaign. Mr. Cleveland was not re-elected, however, but when Congress reconvened, in a paragraph of five lines, ne refers to the subject of trusts, and with this sad and terrifying anare fast becoming the people's masters. But he recommends no relief and suggests no possible way of escape

Two days before the inauguration of thich I have referred made its report, tung forth what evidently appea ed to the commission as a most deplorable committee respectfully, report do not report any list of these combinations, for the reason that new ones are constantly extending their relatifus are constantly extending their relatifus so as to cover new branches of business and invade new territories."

Their words of encouragement which follow must be read in the light of the fact that two days later a Republican Congress, elected some months before, was to convene. Listen!

"Your committee further report that owing to present differences of opinion between the members of your committee they limit this report to submitting to the careful consideration of subsequent Congresses the facts shown by the testimony taken before the committee."

Both the President and the committee acknowledge the existence of harmful trusts and combinations, but neither holds forth to the people any ray of hope except at the bands of those who were about to fill their seats.

NOT LONG INACTIVE.

The Republican Congress was not long factive. The very first hill introduced in the Senate of the Fifty-first Congress was John Sherman's anti-trust bill. Senate File No. 1. It passed both houses and received the signature of Benjamin Harrison.

A principal feature of the machine is that the lee is produced without the aid of any ingredients or preparatives. Whatever is needed for the operation of the machine is supplied at the time of the manifacture of the ice.

A feature of the machine to which the consul directs especial attention is that it will last for years. The cost of manu-consul directs especial attention is that it will hast for years. The cost of manufacturing the small machine described above is only twenty dollars, and the consul says that were they manufactured by machinery expressly made for the purpose the cost would be much less, probably for as much as two-thirds. The consul, who is plainly somewhat enthusiastic over the possibilities of the invention, says that all systems known for the manufacture of ice in a rapid and economical manner have been com-pared with this, and experts have unani-mously declared this to have insuperable advantages over any other of the sys-tems and machines in question.

All of which means that in the near Keeve Jacobs.

Mr. Keeve Jacobs, eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Jacobs, dled yesterday morning at his residence, No. 100 East Marshall Street.

The news of the death of Mr. Jacobs came as a great shock to his family and friends. He was about twenty-seven years of age, but was widely known throughout the city. Recently Mr. Jacobs returned to Richmond, where he contracted the disease which resulted in his death. For four years he was engaged in busiless in Havana, where he was ill for some time, until his brother went to Cuba and arranged to accompany him back to this city. Mr. Jacobs received the best medical attention that could be obtained. His case baffled the physicians, as they were unable to diagnose it. At first it was believed that he was surfering with fever. Later it was supposed that an operation would enlighten the physicians as to the cause of the trouble, but this was never resorted to, as it was learned that the patient might die while undergoing the operation.

Against Colds by Using Pe-ru-na.

THE season of catching cold is upon us. The cough and the sneeze and asal twang are to be heard on every hand. The origin of chronic catarrh, the nost common and dreadful of all diseases,

This is the way the chronic catarrh generally begins. A person catches cold, which hangs on longer than usual. The cold generally starts in the head and throat. Then follows sensitiveness of the nir passages, which incline one to catch cold very easily. At last the person has a cold all the while seemingly, more or less discharge from the nose, hawking, spitches the cold of the throat, nostrills from the person that in the head and sore, inflamed throat.

Catarrh May be Described as Chronic Cald. The best time to Chronic Cold.

While many people have been cured of chronic catarrh by a single bottle of Peruna, yet, as a rule, when the catarrh becomes thoroughly fixed, more than one bottle is necessary to complete a cure, Peruna has cured cases innumerable of catarrh of twenty years' standing. It is the best, if not the only, internal remedy for chronic catarrh in existence.

But prevention is far better than cure. Every person subject to catching cold should take Perum at once at the slightest symptom of cold or sore throat at this season of the year, and thus prevent what is almost certain to end in chronic catarrh.

"I have used several bottles of Peruna and I feel greatly benefited thereby frommy catarrh of the head. I feel encouraged to believe that if I use it a short time longer I will be able to fully cradicate the disease of thirty years' standing."—David Meekison, ex-Member of Congress.
